We're restoring our roof, rewiring the station and laying new tracks, to make Bristol Temple
Meads even better than ever.

Regenerating Bristol's iconic station.

Part of a bigger plan for Bristol Temple Meads and our region

Our new roof and tracks kick start the transformation of Bristol Temple Meads into a world class transport hub.

Over the next few years there are a range of improvements planned, including new entrances, more places to shop and better spaces for onward transport connections.

There are also plans for new stations and local services too, which you can read more about in the railway projects section of the Travelwest website:

Brand new tracks. Better journeys.

We're replacing the tracks outside the station

From 10 July to 3 September we'll be replacing tracks on the approach to the station. It's a big job, taking about eight weeks.

The brand new tracks in a clever new layout will allow trains to come in and out of the station more easily, meaning less delays and better journeys all round.

While this work is taking place, we'll make sure you can still get wherever you're going.

Some trains will be diverted and others will be replaced by buses. Please keep checking nationalrail.co.uk or GWR.com/Bristol for updates.

Brand new roof. Brighter station.

We're restoring our fabulous Grade I listed roof

Over the next couple of years, our specialist teams will be repairing, painting and glazing our iconic station roof. The result will be a brighter and more welcoming station, beautifully preserved for generations to come.

A large safety screen will protect customers and staff from the work going on above. It will be held up by scaffolding towers that we are installing along platforms 3 – 6.

We're rewiring the station

A complete rewire of Bristol Temple Meads starts later this year. It will improve the reliability and efficiency of the station's electrical systems.

Alongside the rewire, we will be installing new customer information screens, improved public announcement systems and CCTV, as well as a new WiFi network.
